Alelbourne.—Melbourne Argus.

The course of trude in this market for the past fortnight has become like a "thrice told tale, a and with the exception of remarking upon the dullicas and depression which still exists, especially for imported manufactures, there is nothing to report but meagre sales, at irregular and in most cases almost entirely nominal prices. Matters instead of mending have day by day been growing more un-satisfactory, until as if by general consent, both untives and foreigners would seem to have come to a complete panel, so far as entering into any fresh operations is concerned. What may be termed the immediate demands for consumption has been the only inducement for natise purchases, and those have invariably been made upon the head to mouth Even upon favorable terms of both price and credit. the Chinese show no willingness whatever to assume fresh responsibilities, and although it is well known that their supplies are very low, if not well nigh extensted, they appear to be satisfied to patiently await the appearance of a legitimate demand from the interior before purchasing. This contious policy, which has been in practice now for some time past, has evidently been induced by province overtrading on the part of many native merchanta, and doubtless it prints to a more healthy and substantial course of trade for the future. With regard to the present inactivity haps the real cause could only be explained by a more thorough knowledge of the interior of China, its wants and it resources, thun is at present known . heat to impossible to judge of the influences which although far removed, very limetly effect the condition of trade here. The harvesting of the rime emp which has been in progress for the past month, is now nearly completed, and as report says the prespects are most encouraging for a bountiful out turn; the matives argue that trade here will soon feel the effects of this stimulus, and improve accordingly. It is this fact also they say Y that has brought about much of the present stagnation, there being during such period little or no demand from the interior for manufactured goods It is also evident from the small sales of Yern and Raw Cotton within the last month, that the native factories have been communing but little material. which would also wern to point to an active trade gs soon as the harvesting season is over. It is many years show the great staple article of food in China, Rice, has been so cheap and abundant as at present, and chapmess and abundance of food is always one of the primary elements of commercial prosperity. The improved condition of the markets at the northern ports has strengthened the position of importers e here somewhat, as well as taken off some partion. 200 of the accumuniating stocks, but such influences as these are scarcely manifest with the existing ted depressed state of trade. The bulk of the transon actions reported below in both Groy Shirtings and in T-Clothe have been for re shipment to the North; of prices remain much as at the date of last report. but are slightly improved parhaps by the recent decline in exchange. As high as $2.924 has been conditions of the market is, the appearance of any thing like business will doubtless have the effect of sending prices up for almost avery description of goods and show a very remunerative margin to the importer.
